

Study looks at lung-cancer screening

DEAR READERS: The Medical World News issue of Sept. 23 reports on results of continuing studies at several institutions, including the Mayo Clinic, on the question of whether aggressive screening for lung cancer — using both chest X-ray and sputum analysis for cancer cells — can increase survival rates in lung cancer victims. While the studies show that the five-year survival rate was higher in the group that was screened aggressively, ultimate mortality rates were identical in both groups. QUESTION: What does NGU stand for?

ANSWER: NGU stands for non-gonococcal urethritis — a phrase that means inflammation of the urethra (urethritis) not caused by the gonococcus bacterium.

Symptoms of urethritis include frequency of urination, painful urination, discharge from the end of the urethra. When such symptoms are reported, cultures and/or smears of the discharge are taken and looked at under the microscope to determine what organism is causing the problem. These tests are quite successful at detecting gonococcus — the organism that causes gonorrhea.

However, in recent years, there has been increasing emphasis on the fact that many individuals with typical symptoms of urethritis do not have gonococcus as the cause.

G. Timothy Johnson, M.D., specializes in family medicine and is a clinical instructor at the Harvard University Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital. Write to him in care of The Orlando Sentinel, P.O. Box 1100, Orlando, Fla. 32802-1100.
